

Why clinical study participation matters

People like you participate in clinical trials every day.

Some study participants choose to participate because they have limited treatment options or no current treatment exists for their disease state. Some study participants may decide a clinical trial is the best chance to possibly help prevent a disease that runs in their family. Others want to contribute their time to help other people who are living with a medical condition.

The decision to join a clinical trial is a personal decision.

We encourage you to talk to your family, consult with your doctor, and ask questions.

Whatever your motivation for joining a clinical trial, you can be confident that you are in great company! Most drugs available in the market today were only made possible by study participants like you.
